New York, NY – November 26, 2018 – Park Avenue Armory announced its 2019 season, which includes evocative new visual and performing arts commissions along with a timely and eclectic lineup of multidisciplinary world and North American premiere productions and installations. Programmed by Pierre Audi, the Armory’s Marina Kellen French Artistic Director, the 2019 season continues the Armory’s commitment to showcasing some of the most innovative artists from around the world, while sustaining relationships with a community of world-class collaborators. With theater, film, music, visual art installations, spoken word and performative gatherings, and intellectual symposia, each engagement during the season presents a visually captivating aesthetic that both transforms and amplifies the Armory’s Wade Thompson Drill Hall and provides engaging experiences for audiences. Alongside its Drill Hall productions, the season also includes intimate performances in the gorgeous historic reception rooms by virtuoso singers and musicians.

“Showcasing an impressive range of artists and directorial talents, this season presents cutting-edge, issue-driven, new work that highlights some of the most pressing issues of our time,” said Rebecca Robertson, Founding President and Executive Producer of Park Avenue Armory. “The Armory is committed to providing a first platform in New York for powerhouse artists who are making waves around the world, while supporting new projects by artists who have been a part of the Armory community for years. By offering these artists the freedom and inspiration to create their work unencumbered by traditional limitations, we have created a season that mines the myriad possibilities of our historic spaces.”

“While the productions in our 2019 season are all rooted in our contemporary moment, each in its own way invokes the past, reinventing history in a modern context to help reorient the present-day moral compass of our society,” said Pierre Audi, the Marina Kellen French Artistic Director of Park Avenue Armory. “From The Lehman Trilogy, which illuminates the seeds of our financial system and the unlimited opportunity to attain the American Dream, to Drill by Hito Steyerl, which draws upon archival research to explore some of the most pressing social issues of the present day, to Theaster Gates’ Black Artists Retreat, which emerges from the tradition of spirited public-forums of the 1960s, to the socially-relevant adaptation of Judgment Day, an 80-year-old play examining divergent truths, conscience, and consequences, the season illuminates the significant issues the world is grappling with today. Alongside the Drill Hall programming, the Artists Studio and Recital Series re-enliven our historic period rooms with contemporary art and creative practices. We’re looking at the inevitable interplay between past and present, reflecting and revising to help forge paths forward.”

The Armory’s 2019 Wade Thompson Drill Hall programming kicks off in March with the North American premiere of The Lehman Trilogy, a theater work by Stefano Massini, adapted by Ben Power, directed by Sam Mendes, told in three parts in a single evening, tracing nearly two centuries of Lehman lineage, following the brothers Henry, Emanuel, and Mayer Lehman from their 1844 arrival in New York City to the 2008 collapse of the financial firm bearing their name. In a masterclass of acting, Simon Russell Beale, Adam Godley, and Ben Miles play the Lehman brothers and a cast of characters, including their sons and grandsons. As the inaugural production of the 2019 season, The Lehman Trilogy builds on the Armory’s history of presenting bold and engaging theater productions that require vast, untraditional space for their full realization.

In June, composer and director Heiner Goebbels returns to the Armory for the North American premiere of Everything That Happened and Would Happen, a non-linear work commissioned by the Armory. Part-performance, part-construction site, Everything That Happened and Would Happen reconstructs 100 years of history to show a world in strife within the Wade Thompson Drill Hall’s industrial architecture and atmosphere, using moving image, music, sound, and projections to invoke a sensorial and immersive experience that ruminates on the cyclical cycle of societal destruction.

Visual artist, filmmaker, and activist Hito Steyerl takes over the Wade Thompson Drill Hall and historic period rooms in June, with her new commission Drill. Emerging from Steyerl’s practice of blending fact, fiction, and documentary-style storytelling, Drill is a multi-layered experience with several film installations throughout the Armory. The Wade Thompson Drill Hall will feature a new, site-specific work, commissioned by the Armory, with additional video and sculptural installations sited throughout the Armory’s historic period rooms curated by Armory Visual Art Curator Tom Eccles.

Fall 2019 at the Armory begins with renowned Japanese theater director Satoshi Miyagi, who will bring his multicultural adaptation of Antigone to the Armory in September. For the second time in the Armory’s history, the Wade Thompson Drill Hall will be flooded with water for this version of Sophoeles’ tragedy that Miyagi incorporates as an integral part of his production. Large stones scattered throughout the body of water punctuate the setting for the cast of characters who are embroiled in a bitter war of honor. This production reinvigorates this Greek classic with the traditions of Japanese Noh, Indonesian shadow play, and Buddhist philosophy.

To celebrate the completion of the replacement of the wooden flooring lining the Wade Thompson Drill Hall, artist Theaster Gates will host Sonic Soul Session #1, a public celebration with roller skating, DJs and performers, and other special guests among his seven-foot-tall disco-ball glacial sculptures, known as housebergs. The event is part of Gates’ renowned Black Artists Retreat, an artist-led, annual convening of black visual artists designed to facilitate the exchange of ideas and innovation, which will take place in New York City for the first time. Titled Black Artists Retreat 2019: Sonic Imagination, this year’s gathering will examine how sound yields power and explores new ways of infusing artistic practice with the sonic. The event also includes keynote presentations as part of the Armory’s Interrogations of Form series and will include private workshops created specifically for Retreat participants.

Following his critically acclaimed and eight-time Drama Desk–nominated production of The Hairy Ape at the Armory in 2017, director Richard Jones returns in December with Judgment Day. Rounding out the 2019 season, Ödön von Horváth’s 1937 play will come to life through the world premiere of a new adaptation by Pulitzer Prize finalist and Obie Award–winning playwright Christopher Shinn. Jones will stage a new production of the ambitious work which explores morality, responsibility, and guilt of a small town’s train station master and his community. Judgment Day will take on special resonance set in the Wade Thompson Drill Hall—reminiscent of nineteenth century train sheds, with its vaulted ceiling and raw industrial design.

Throughout the year, the Armory will present a roster of intimate performances, lectures, artist talks, and educational programs in the jewel-like interiors of its historic period rooms. The Board of Officers Room provides a home for chamber music concerts through the Armory’s Recital Series, while the Veterans Room hosts a contemporary, eclectic mix of music and performance by experimental artists as part of the Artists Studio, curated by Jason Moran. The 2019 Artists in Residence—including installation and performance artist Tania Bruguera; set designer and director Christine Jones; choreographer Steven Hoggett; and playwright and screenwriter Lynn Nottage—will utilize the Armory’s period rooms to develop their practice through the creation of new works.

Additionally, the Armory continues its Interrogations of Form series, convening artists, community, and thought-leaders to engage in a vigorous, multi-dimensional exploration of today’s social and cultural landscape. This year’s series offers day-long symposia, artist talks, keynotes, installations, performances, and salons that cover a range of relevant topics, including the state of culture in a changing America, the role of citizen artists in politically charged environments, how notions of beauty are evolving in the ballet world, and how the power of spoken word and comedy can help audiences navigate challenging topics.

Subscriptions for the 2019 season go on sale on Monday, November 26 at www.armoryonpark.org / (212) 933-5812. See page 16 for additional ticketing information.
THE LEHMAN TRILOGY
March 22 – April 30, 2019

From the arrival of three brothers from a small town in Germany to America in search of a better life, to the spectacular collapse of the firm they established triggering the largest financial crisis in history, the story of the Lehman Brothers traces the trajectory of capitalism by following the fortunes of a single immigrant family. Originally documented by Italian playwright Stefano Massini, this vast and poetic play gets a dramatic new life at the Armory following a sold-out run at the National Theatre in London in an engrossing adaptation by Ben Power, commissioned by Neal Street Productions for director Sam Mendes. The Lehman Trilogy will transfer to London’s West End, to the Piccadilly Theatre, following its New York debut.

Simon Russell Beale, Adam Godley, and Ben Miles reprise their critically acclaimed portrayals of the Lehman Brothers, their sons, and grandsons in this transfixing epic of riches and ruin, spanning nearly two centuries and told in three parts on a single evening. Es Devlin’s set backed by Luke Halls’s video designs provides a panorama of a changing American landscape against which the dynastic drama unfolds. Making its North American premiere, this electrifying production serves as a parable of the shifting definition of the American dream.

EVERYTHING THAT HAPPENED AND WOULD HAPPEN
June 3 – 9, 2019

Heiner Goebbels’s fascination with literature, politics, and anthropology manifests itself in richly textured visual compositions that integrate a wide range of classical, jazz, and contemporary music. Having captivated Armory audiences with his hypnotic use of zeppelins, nuns, and a flock of sheep in De Materie in 2016 as well as in-motion sculptural pianos and elements from nature in his haunting production Stifter’s Dinge in 2009, the visionary director and composer returns for his latest highly imaginative production blending live music, performance, sound, movement, and moving image.

This new commission, originally produced by Artangel and adapted by Park Avenue Armory, is inspired by contrasting source materials in a sideways view of history from the First World War to the present day including: Patrik Ouředník’s 2001 book Europeana, a surprising deconstruction of the 20th century that juxtaposes seismic events and trivial anecdotes often jumbled up and out of sequence; re-purposed costumes, props, and sets from Goebbels’s own 2012 staging Europeras, John Cage’s interpretation of 200 years of European opera; and feeds from Euronews’s “No Comment”—original, unedited footage of that day’s news without commentary or mediation.
The resulting work ruminates on civilizations continual cycle of self-destruction, immersing audiences in a series of visually striking tableaus that evoke a sequence of thoughts, questions, and manifestos of the ever-changing chaotic world. Part-performance, part-construction site, this groundbreaking work is a poetic re-enactment of history, always on the verge of collapse and only to be rebuilt as if nothing had happened.

HITO STEYERL: DRILL
June 20 – July 21, 2019

A filmmaker, philosopher, and cultural critic, Hito Steyerl roots her investigative practice in the proliferation of digital images and their large-scale implications. Her practice takes a strong political stand, while being unafraid to challenge the power of the art market, the politics of images, and the state of human consciousness in the age of technologically advanced capitalism. Taking the form of essays, lectures, installations, video, and photography, her work is combined with dogged outspokenness to critically influence agendas internationally.
Steyerl comes to the Armory with her most recent installation in the U.S. to date, commissioned by the Armory and curated by Armory visual art curator Tom Eccles. Steyerl utilizes both the Wade Thompson Drill Hall and historic interiors of the building in mounting both pre-existing works as well as new projects commissioned by the Armory in her ongoing illumination of the world’s power structures, inequalities, and obscurities. When viewed collectively, this material allows the viewer to zoom in on and out from some of the most complex and pressing issues of our time.

A New Commission by Park Avenue Armory

About Hito Steyerl

Her films and lectures have increasingly addressed the presentational context of art, while her writing has circulated widely through publication in both academic and art journals, often online.

Recent solo exhibitions have been held at Kunstmuseum, Basel (2018); The Institute of Contemporary Art, Boston (2017); the Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles (2016); Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofia, Madrid, Spain (2015); and the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago (2013). ANTIGONE
September 25 – October 6, 2019

Sophocles created characters with psychological depth and complexity in this universal play that are as resonant now as when it was written nearly 2,500 years ago. The Greek tragedy hinges on a young girl disobeying the king by giving her brother the same funeral rites that he had been denied after a fratricidal combat, challenging the injustice of men to obey the laws of the gods and following her heart by putting his soul to rest. What followed was an intense exploration of humanity, morality, law, and justice that left few unharmed.

Famed Japanese director Satoshi Miyagi creates a new version of this fabled mythology that looks at this ancient play through the prism of Japanese culture. He turns the stage into a flowing river of water, known in many spiritual beliefs to separate the world of the living from that of the dead. This fresh take presents a play about loss and memorialization in a way that is both timeless and timely, mixing the foundational principles of Greek tragedy, Japanese Noh theater, Indonesian shadow play, and the philosophy of Buddhist monks to negotiate the boundaries of intercultural encounters while creating a new theatrical universe of globalized proportions. This acclaimed production makes its North American debut following its premiere by the company at the Cour d’honneur du Palais d’Pape in 2017.

His Buddhist interpretation of the ancient Greek mythological tragedy Antigone opened the Festival d’Avignon in 2017, marking the first time an Asian play had ever been selected to launch the festival.

THEASTER GATES’S BLACK ARTISTS RETREAT 2019: SONIC IMAGINATION
October 11 – 12, 2019

Theaster Gates is a charismatic figure in the contemporary art world, with a practice situated both within and without gallery walls, vacillating between aesthetics, urban planning, and activism. He creates sculptures with clay, tar, and conceptions of space, transforming the raw material into radically reimagined black spaces for culture while establishing a virtuous circle between fine art and social progress.

The multi-faceted artist comes to the Armory to host his renowned Black Artists Retreat for the first time outside of Chicago. In celebration of this momentous gathering, the Retreat includes a public celebration with roller skating, DJs and performers, and other special guests amidst an installation of some of the artist’s famous “housebergs” — seven-feet-tall sculptural disco balls shaped like icebergs. The party also marks the completion of the replacement of the wooden flooring of the Wade Thompson Drill Hall, which includes recycled pine planks milled by Gates’s workforce and repurposed from his Chicago urban manufacturing renewal project, Dorchester Industries, amongst other sources. The Retreat weekend also intersects with the Armory’s Interrogations of Form series with two public discussions featuring leading artists, scholars, and activists.

The retreat recreates the kind of public-spirited dialogue that he associates with the civil rights movement of the sixties, aiming to make the current landscape of artistic practice stronger by amplifying creators and their projects. The 2019 Retreat focuses on the numerous ways in which contemporary artists play with sound, hosting artists, filmmakers, musicians, and sound theorists to reflect on ways in which sound provides power and creates shared experiences that move creators forward.

About Theaster Gates
Theaster Gates (b. 1973, Chicago) creates sculpture, installation, and performance work that focuses on space theory and land development. Drawing on his interest and training in urban planning and preservation, Gates redeems spaces that have been left behind and creates interventions that bridge the gap between art and life. Known for his recirculation of art-world capital, Gates smartly upturns art values, land values, and human values in his work and contends with the notion of Black space as a formal exercise – one defined by collective desire, artistic agency, and the tactics of a pragmatist.

Gates has exhibited and performed internationally including at the National Gallery of Art, Washington D.C., USA (2017); Art Gallery of Ontario, Canada (2016); Fondazione Prada, Milan, Italy (2016); Whitechapel Gallery, London, UK (2013); and dOCUMENTA (13), Kassel, Germany (2012). He was the winner of the Artes Mundi 6 prize and the Nasher Prize for Sculpture 2018 and is the recent recipient of the Légion d'Honneur, awarded 2017.

JUDGMENT DAY
December 5, 2019 – January 11, 2020

Ódón von Horváth’s seldom-performed, penultimate play from 1937 is an intriguing hybrid of theatrical genres: part moral fable, part sociopolitical comedy, part noirish thriller. This gripping work follows the actions of a meticulous and dutiful station master, who struggles with the overwhelming power of conscience and guilt.

Having enthralled Armory audiences and critics with his mesmerizing revival of The Hairy Ape in 2017, visionary director Richard Jones returns to take on this riveting commentary about the responsibility to find the accurate truth in a new adaptation by Pulitzer Prize finalist and Obie Award-winning playwright Christopher Shinn.

This new production dramatically plays on the interior of the Wade Thompson Drill Hall – reminiscent of the original Grand Central Depot and the great train stations of Europe – as an immersive environment in which the characters become overwhelmed by conscience and the burden of guilt. The result is a fresh take on the portrait of a society that easily believes in a version of the truth and refuses to take responsibility for its actions, themes that still resonate in today’s socio-political climate.

Dudok Quartet Amsterdam

New York Debut

The Dudok Quartet Amsterdam is one of most wide-ranging string quartets of our time, with heartfelt performances that spotlight the essence of their music – of both contemporary works and classics that feel revelatory and new. The esteemed ensemble makes their New York debut with programs focusing on compositions by Haydn and Ligeti that artfully showcase their versatility and superb musicianship. They open their residency with an evening of works that employ contrapuntal techniques in a variety of forms, intertwined with ancient short pieces ranging from the 11th century to J.S. Bach. The dramatic qualities in the works of Haydn and Ligeti are amplified in the second program, enlightened by Mendelssohn’s final string quartet, written as a deeply personal requiem for his suddenly deceased younger sister.

Miya Masaoka
A prolific and consistently experimental composer, improviser, and performer, Miya Masaoka has developed a legendary reputation in New York and in global jazz and avant-garde circles with her compositions that expand on our understanding of sound. A longtime explorer of the intersection of technology and music-making, her practice includes performances with interactivity in her ongoing considerations of temporality and perception. The multifaceted artist premieres The Long Arc of Time, a new chamber work that draws from the music and unique rhythm of Noh and Shomyo (Buddhist chant). Developed with Noh actors and musicians from Japan and celebrated soprano Kamala Sankaram, the work ruminates on loss, rebirth, and transcendence and contemporizes the disruption of reality while challenging our senses in a new and radical way. This libretto is based on poet Tracie Morris’s Grey: A Tale of Time, and was commissioned by Masaoka for this occasion.

Malik Gaines and Alexandro Segade

Malik Gaines and Alexandro Segade are founding members of the collective My Barbarian, who work at the intersection of theater, visual arts, critical practice, and performance to play with social difficulties, theatricalize historic problems, and imagine ways of being together. Realized as drawings, texts, masks, videos, music, installations, and audience interactions, their projects employ fantasy, humor, and clashing aesthetic sensibilities to cleverly critique artistic, political, and social situations. The performance troupe creates and performs a new work, Star Choir, which was developed while serving as Armory artists-in-residence. Combining vocals and a mix of orchestral and electronic instruments with animated video projection, this multifaceted project tracks a group of humans who attempt to colonize a distant planet after the earth’s decline.

Rosa Barba

Rosa Barba is an artist with a sculptural approach to film and the ways it articulates space, placing the work and the viewer in a new relationship. Her projects encompass film, sculpture, installation, and text grounded in the material and conceptual qualities of cinema. Her film works are situated between experimental documentary and fictional narrative, often focusing on natural landscapes and man-made interventions into the environment that probe into the relationship of historical record, personal anecdote, and filmic representation, creating spaces of memory and uncertainty. The cutting-edge artist invites audiences into her conceptual practice by recasting their perspective in an act of radical reversal with images. She comes to the Armory to a multi-faceted work, collaborating with percussionist Chad Taylor on a live work performed within an enigmatic installation also on display in several of the historic rooms and spaces, including the Veterans Room.

ABOUT PARK AVENUE ARMORY

Part palace, part industrial shed, Park Avenue Armory fills a critical void in the cultural ecology of New York by enabling artists to create, students to explore, and audiences to experience, unconventional work that cannot be mounted in traditional performance halls and museums. With its soaring 55,000-square-foot Wade Thompson Drill Hall—reminiscent of 19th-century European train stations—and an array of exuberant period rooms, the Armory offers a platform for creativity across all art forms. Together, these and other spaces within the historic building utilized for arts programming comprise the Thompson Arts Center, named in recognition of the Thompson family’s ongoing support of the institution.

Since its first production in September 2007, the Armory has organized and commissioned immersive performances, installations, and cross-disciplinary collaborations in its vast drill hall that defy traditional categorization and challenge artists to push the boundaries of their practice. In its historic period rooms, the Armory presents small-scale performances and programs, including its acclaimed Recital Series, which showcases musical talent from across the globe within the intimate salon setting of the Board of Officers Room; and the new Artists Studio series in the newly restored Veterans Room, which features innovative artists and artistic pairings that harken back to the imaginative collaboration and improvisation of the original group of designers who conceived the space. The Armory also offers robust arts education programs at no cost to underserved New York City public school students, engaging them with the institution’s artistic programming and the building’s history and architecture.

Programmatic highlights from the Armory’s first 10 years include Bernd Alois Zimmermann’s harrowing Die Soldaten, in which the audience moved “through the music”; the event of a thread, a site-specific installation by Ann Hamilton; the final performances of the Merce Cunningham Dance Company across three separate stages; If’s by Paul McCarthy, a monumental installation of fantasy, excess, and dystopia; an immersive Macbeth set in a Scottish heath and henge by Rob Ashford and Kenneth Branagh; a profound and radically inclusive staging of Bach’s St. Matthew Passion staged by Peter Sellars and performed by Sir Simon Rattle and the Berliner Philharmoniker; Louis Andriessen’s De Materie in a highly imaginative staging by director Heiner Goebbels that included floating zeppelins and a flock of 100 sheep; Circle Map, two evenings of immersive spatial works by internationally acclaimed composer Kaija Saariaho performed by the New York Philharmonic with mise-en-espace by Armory Artistic Director Pierre Audi; eight-time Drama Desk-nominated play The Hairy Ape, directed by Richard Jones and starring Bobby Cannavale; Pierre Boulez’s masterwork Répons, performed twice each evening by Ensemble intercontemporain and IRCAM under the baton of Matthias Pintscher with the audience changing seats in between to get a new sonic perspective; Simon Stone’s award-winning Yerma, starring Billie Piper in a devastating and modern exploration of Federico Garcia Lorca’s tale of a woman’s desire to have a child; and Nick Cave’s The Let Go, a complete transformation of the Wade Thompson Drill Hall into an immersive, multi-sensory dance-based town hall; and Ivo van Hove’s adaptation of Luchino Visconti’s screenplay of The Damned, starring Comedie-Française in a chilling and topical rumination on political depravity.

Concurrent with its artistic program, the Armory has undertaken an ongoing $215-million revitalization of its historic building, designed by architects Herzog & de Meuron. www.armoryonpark.org.
